Occupants of a Big Tenement Thrown Into a Panic.

Many Brave Rescues by Fire Laddies and Policemen.

Shortly after 4 o'clock this mornio broke out in the cellar of the five story tenement-house known as "The of Death," at 50 East Houston The building certves its name from the extraordinary number of deaths which have occurred there during the Bernard Gerrity, who lives on the top floor with his wife and seven children, started for the bakery at 4.5 o'clock. When he reached the second floor he was met by a volume of smoke. Without stopping to investigate its source, he rusned into the street with a cry of fire. Near the corner of Mott street, two men stood talking. When they heard the cry and saw the smoke they rushed to Police Headquarters, which is directly around the corner on Mulberry street, and had an alarm turned in.

Then the two men ran around to the burning building to help get the tenants out. The men were Robert Fuller, of as Macdougal street, and Robert Chifford, of Stanton street.

Macdougal street, and Robert Clifford, of 64 Stanton street.

No flames could be seen, but the smoke poured from every crevice of the building on the ground floor. On this floor there is a barber shop and a tin store. The first is kept by Frank Thompson and the latter by Nikolas Kupfer.

Fuller saw little Loretta Maxwell, six years old, in night gown and barefooted, clinging to the coping on the first floor. She had climbed from the third floor down the fire-escape, but could get no further.

further. Fuller shouted to the child to cling tightly to her support until he could get to her. He then climbed up the barberpole, thus reaching the coping, where little Loretta was caught in his arms and passed to Sergt. Kelleher helow, who had just arrived. She was taken out of the cold to Gerrity's saloon near by. Just as the first engines arrived, Mrs. Holz, who lives on the third floor, over the tin shop, stepped out on the window-sill.
